Thanks Michele! I was a bit concerned when I read that [REDACTED], Sr., had just 2 children. If I remember correctly, "John Adams" has written as if he grew up in a very large family, although his older brother did have 8 children and, if they all lived in the same area, I suppose "John Adams" did grow up in a very large "extended family." If there is some way for Jim, through other resources, to find a "smoking gun" that would be a good idea.
If it were me, I would want more proof and some type of evidence that directly links Laird Scott to "John Adams."

Thanks again,
[REDACTED]

I just did a "Google Search" on [REDACTED] and found and read the article in The Wisconsin State Journal about the MAP group in Whitewater. The article was published November 16, 2003. I never paid any attention to that group so I didn't know until just a few minutes ago that [REDACTED] was the president/leader of that group. I think it would be a great idea to go through past issues of the Whitewater Register from November 1, 2003 through March 1, 2004 (the article says the referendum on the issue was scheduled for February 17, 2004). By reading articles about MAP and, perhaps most importantly, reading Letters to the Editor during that time frame, I think you'll be able to find several samples of the writing and thinking of both [REDACTED] and [REDACTED]. The article about MAP in the Wisconsin State Journal article I just read (from November 16, 2003) has several quotes from [REDACTED] that you need to read. They are almost identical to the views expressed and the words used by John Adams/[REDACTED] in his postings about Whitewater City government and city officials.

[REDACTED] This would be a perfect time to see if [REDACTED] is out of town. I'm not sure exactly how you'd do that but I have a couple of ideas;

1. [REDACTED] is on the Landmarks Commission and maybe another commission or two. Perhaps someone could call her home, ostensibly about some city business (just in case she's home!). If they're not there, that would be very, very interesting.

2. Perhaps the Post Office is holding their mail this week if they're gone. I don't know if that's something they can reveal, but, if it is something that can be found out that would be very valuable.
